-Logan Brown was tried before Judge There being no evidence sufficient to boid blm for circuit court, he was acquitted. From the evidence before the court it appeared that the three brothers Logan, Sam and Lecy Brown, all under the influence of liquor, started home from Gilpin's Store iste Monday evening, 15th. On the route Lecy demanded of Logan that he must pay lilm some money that the latter owed him. Logan told him several times that it was impossible for him to pay the amount, for he hadn't the money. No pleadings of inaldiity to liquidate the lebt at the time would satisfy Lecy and he told his brother that he would shoot it out of him, gave him a kick and opened fire upon him. After firing two shots, Logan giving back at the same time, said he thought he would fire in the direction of Lecy to stop him from shooting, but having three loads in his pistol they ail went off together, with fatsi effect, as before stated. TOLD AT THE GRAVE.

A STORY FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

(Copyright, 1863, by American Press Associa-

T THE base of a mountain spar in northern Arkunsas is a grave. There is an air of subdued romatic about the place an indescribable something that breathes a hallowed sadness. The country is of old but thin settlement. Up the narrow vaileys the ferus are rank, and on the hillsides beflowered vines cling to the rugged trees. The grave is under a willow that shades an open space. It is the only willow in the neighborhood. Cince every year since the war a man and a woman have come from the north to decorate this lone grave. At first the woman, bright eyed and springy of step. was exceedingly handsome, but latterly time had ceased to be playful with her. The man was sturdy and of sober mien. He looked as if his life had always held a secret suffering. This man and this woman have rather a unique history.

At the time of the breaking out of the war John and Henry Archer, brothers so nearly alike that they were often taken for twins, lived in Lake county, Ills. John was engaged to marry Tress Prvor, and the day for the wedding was appointed, but before the time came c drum beat, and sturdy young tellownustered on the grass.

It was evening, and Tress Pryor was standing on the veranda. John rode np. sprang off his horse and with a new tec cent in his manner-a peculiar bearingcame up the walk.

The next day John and Henry were nustered into the service, and it wer not long before they were under tire One day in a skirmish not far from Fayetteville, Ark., John was shot while standing under a willow tree. He was so severely wounded that it was thought he could live but a few hours, but when the next morning had come he showed signs of improvement. He was taken to the hospital, and his brother Henry was detailed to attend him until an advance should be ordered. One day there camto the hospital a young woman from Kentucky. She had been regarded as a belle in the blue grass country, but she gave up society and went south to nurse wounded soldiers. This young woman took special interest in John Archer. She made a romance of her duty, and at times when the wounder man seemed brighter than usual she would sit near his cot and read poetry to him. But upon this Henry began to look with disapproval, and once when the girl land gone to fetch another book he said to his brother:

"I don't think that's right, John." "Don't think what's right?"

"Why, having that girl read love verse to you.

"She's reading to herself as much as she is to rue.

"I don't know about that, John." "I de.

"Well, but I don't think it's right, and I know Tress wouldn't approve it." "Then why doesn't she come and read to me?"

"She doesn't know that you are wounded. I haven't had the heart to

"Well, I told her that she should marry a hero. You see, I thought I'd go home covered with glory."

"Oh, you are engaged to her." "Yes, in a way."

After returning home it was some time before henry had the conrage to call on Tress Pryor. But one evening he went to see her. As he entered the gate he saw her standing on the spot where she had stood when John cano dashing up to tell her that he was going, to the war. Ensity Made, There are a great many women who love to possess fanciful things, yet deny themselves this pleasure because they think all funcy work is expensive. Some of it is, but it is possible to make lovely articles for a very smull outlay and indeed in many instances without any expense at all, for in almost every house there is quite a large amount of material lying at hand ready for use which any woman with skillful fingers can fashion

into dainty and useful articles. An inexpensive and daintily decorated whisk broom holder may be made of two dozen 1-Inch rings covered by crocheting them with silk. The support for the back of the case is made by covering a strip of pasteboard with satin or silk matching in color the silk on the rings A small brass chain is sewed all around this piece, and the case is suspended by the same. The ungs should be sewed together-six in each of the first three rows, four in the next and two in the last. Small brass balls are attached to the lower corner rings and give the holder a pretty finish. Figured silk forms the material for a useful article-a sort of paper holder or catch all. The foundation consists of three bamboo comes fastened so that their centers cross. The triangular space between each two of the canes above the centers is filled with a piece of paste bourd cut to fit and covered on both side: with silk overhanded on the edges. These pieces should be slightly rounded at the top, and the three being covered should be overhanded together. The basket thus formed is then fastened to the canes, whose ends project about an hich above. A narrow galloon, from which fall tiny tassels, is sewed along the top edges. Ribbon bows at each corner and where the cones cross finish this graceful basket. It is designed to hold which the owner may be engaged.

A fancy portfolio that is very pretty i made of bengaline stiffened with canvas. It may be made any desired size. The ends of the sections are folded over so as to almost meet the center, and between are inserted fans of silk, which give lepth "I don't know how it may be with to the pockets thus formed. Three bows are tacked hear one corner of the pocket and may serve to hold pens and pencils. "Ch, you have been in love, then, have: The pockets and the outside of the portfolio may be decorated with simple designs in oils. Flowered and figured silk works up beautifully this way and when used requires no additional decora-

An exquisite little article, handsome enough to be used in any parlor or drawing room, is a fancy working made of brocaded silk and lined with surah. It requires about one yard and a quarter of silk 20 mches wide for the outside and two yards for the inside, including pockets. Two yards and a half of incl. wile ribbon of each color will be suffi cient for the strings. First ent out a circular pieco of cardboard 6 mches i diamet r and cover one side with the brocaded and the other side with the lin-

The bag itself should be 10 inches deep (including the ruttle at the top) and yard around. The pockets consist of pece of lining hemmed at the top and laid on the outside of the lining. Baste down to the outside to form six pockers. and feather stitch through from the out side with embroidery silk. A casing is run in just above the pockets and basa. clastic inserted in it. This bag would make a very nice present to any woman friend whose letsure hours are occupted by fancy work. Pale green satin is the material from which a very landsome handkerchief ba, presenmently bestowed upon her, ac can be made. Procure two pieces of heavy pasteboard, circular in shape and about 8 inches lu diameter, and cut walding the exact size, using two layers for the inside of the bag. Sprinkle a great deal of suchet powder upon the wad drug; then lay the disks of wadding upon one of the pieces of pasteboard and hold them in place by covering the circle with chrese cloth. Cover the other circle with. pale green satin; then a strip of the satur just long enough to go around the circle is turned over at the top to form a hem. At the lower edge a casing is made by stitching the henr around twice on the machine, using pale green sewing silk. In this easing put two pink silk cords for drawing strings. Then sew the stril to the lower pasteboard used for the bot tom and alterward insert the scented circle, catching it in place with invisible stitches. Then turn it right side out again and sew wild roses (procured at the millmer's) around the lower edge.

The above desirable articles are al easily and quickly made, and beside being useful each one will do a greadeal toward giving a room a certain a r of daintmess. Girera de Whilett.

A POPULAR NOVELIST.

Miss Mait Crim Has that an Interesting Literary Cureer.

Miss Matt Crim, the popular young southern novelist, was born in Louisiana, but has spent most of her life in Georgia. She was educated at home entirely and knows nothing of the ordinary schoolgirl life. Her earliest stories were printed in The Snmy South, an Atlanta weekly, and in the Savannah News. Her that story to appear in The Century was "An Unfortunit Creetar," a sketch of power and pathos Since then many stories from her pen have been printed in that magazine, and Ihrper's and The Independent have also published stories

Her books are the "The Adventures of a Fair Rebel" and "In Bouver Cove and Elsewhere"-the first a complete novel, the second a collection of well written short stories. The latter has been published in England.

Miss Crim makes her home in New York and is at present engaged on a novel and a play. Her stories have been enhanced by Kemble's illustrations and her novel by Beard's. The first man of letters to show appreciation of Mis-Crim's telent and to give her encourage ment was Joel Chamller Harris. She feels that she owes much to the kind and sustaining friendship of Mr. E. C. Stead man and treasures gratefully his estlmate of her abilities. In appearance she is graceful and girlish. Her manner is entirely simple and unaffected. Sho i quite young, and her future promises all that her two literary godfathers have predicted for her. Mrs. R. Conquitt.

THE WIFE'S IDEAL.

It Is seldem Found, but the "Second Best" Is Not to He Despised.

witty and observant Frenchman once said that a woman would forgive a husband who beat her if he prefuced the performance by presenting her with a bouquet. Amelie Rives speaks of some one giving "the hopeless and helpless sigh of one who feels that she could make better love than her lover."

It is, to say the least, unfortunate that the sex which so peculiarly appreciates certain qualities should be the only one broadly speaking, to possess them. Con erotradders sideration in little things, delicate per ceptions, quick intuitions these are of vital importance to a woman's highest happeness and they are the very thing which, whatever olse may come to her she is certain never to have and to hold.

But "the second bests of life" are not to be despised. No one has what he most wiches for, and they can be still happy and in a great measure contented who receive something a good deal lower than their ideal, and woman in the ab stract, who is by nature most imperative and critical in her demands, has also had cording to the divine law of equation, that faculty of making the lest of circonnstances. Itr. Holmes expresses his pitying wonder over an obvious truth, "There is nothing short of a gorilla which a good and pretty woman cannot take and make a husband out of."

The lumsband she wants, then, is causiderate and thoughtful. He remembers her little aches and pains, and, in the quaint southern phrase, "muches" her. That is her day dream. What she alisolutely requires is that he should be manly, not petty or effeminate, not given to goesip and meannesses that we sorrowfully admit belong by right or wrong to the weaker vessel.

He should be truthful-ut least moderately truthful. He should take her into his comblence and tell her what he is doing in his business and why and what. It is not easy to forgive him who causes one mortin ation; so according to his means he should be just if not generous, aml never, never make her stoop to what is painful beyond guessing by his barger, blunter senses- the asking him for 1 Ducy. Neither should that buter mortiacation come through may open neglect, nor tarkind, if thoughtless, speech or combact.

She wants him to be the soul of honor, to be kind and brave, and to respect religion and to walk within its ways-to be, in slart, not alone a husband, but u father-the model to whom she may point father—the model to whom she may point those fittle fellows leaning upon her knee and say to them, "You know that is right because your father does it, and this is wrong because ho would scorn the very thought."

Coleman'a Eureka, the grandsire of Eureka Cheif, was by Young's Morgan dam by Boston &c.

Eureka Cheif is a worthy representative of a horse that founded as great a family of saddle horses as any stallion that ever made a season in Kentucky, viz: Coleman's Eureka. Coleman's Eureka was never beaten in saddla and combined rings, and he imparted to his get size, color, style and finish. Eureka, though a young horse, has won about so blue ribbons at Kentucky Fairs. Eureka Cheif has never been shown, was not broken to saddle until last year; but judging from his size, style, color and action, wa predict for bim the same success that has attended his sire and grandsire in show rings. His dam Mag, by Blood Cheif Jr., was a winner is all classes and by a horse that never sired a mean one. This borse is bred right to sire horses that will command tha attention of all intelligent horsemen. Ha is good individually and can show for himself in any company. THE remains of the late beloved presi dent of the Confederate States, Hon. Jefferson Davis, will be moved from their temporary resting place at New Orleans to Hollywood Cemetery next week, where they will await the resurrection. The three days' journey will be a continuous ovation by the Sonthern people, in honor of their departed leader. The ceremonies at Richmond will be very imple. After the procession has halted in the cemetery, and the various organizations have been assigned to the posltions they will occupy, the band will render a funeral dirge, which has been composed by Prof. Jacob Relnhard, of that city. Bishop Hngh Miller Thomp. son, of Mississippi, will read a selection from Scripture, after which the hymn, "How Firm a Foundation," will be sung. the Second Presbyterian church, of Riched by Rev. BILL NYE RELATES BURBANK'S EX-PERIENCE WITH ONE.

And He Then Says It Really Happened to Himself, For lie Is Mr. Burbank's Friend. Roundabout In Washington-Why Colonel Visscher Was Induces to Leave Town.

[Copyright, 1893, by Edgar W. Nye.] The steam radiator at a hotel furnishes more cause for serious thought, especially in the still watches of the night. than any other problem I know of. Most of them have water on the brain.

HE BECAME IRRITATED.

When you go in a room and smell the hot, damp carpet, you know at once that the radiator is not seaworthy. The other night Mr. Burbauk's radiator began about midnight to get restless and palpitate. At first it just gave two or three kicks at itself and moaned. Mr. Burbank turned over in his bed and said: "Ah, the radiator is repairing itself."

Then he went to sleep. Soon after he woke with a start and heard the radiator rumble like a distant freight train crossing three or four other lines of road. At the end she seemed to hit one coil with another and began to mix things. He looked at his watch and saw that it was half past 12. Tired nature then yielded, and with a long drawn sigh at 30 days he went to sleep. He awoke again to hear the radiator riveting its boiler and generally refitting itself.

He lighted his last match and saw that it was half past 1 o'clock. He tried to go to sleep and began counting 1,000 tc settle his nerves. He was joined by the radiator. He threw off the covers and said: "There is water in that radiator. That's what makes it practice all night trying to play 'The Awakening of the Lion.' I will let the water out, and then I can sleep."

So he got up softly and started for the electric light to turn on same. He was a little dazed and stepping high, so he stepped into his trunk. Then he knew where he was and started across the room, but was met by the center table, cities as Seattle and Tucoma before a which had a late lunch on it. It contained, among other things, some bread with jam on it and some cheese that had come from Germany at a time when the quarantine regulations were looser than they are new.

He upset this table. "Now I know where everything is," said Mr. Burbank. "This cheese is in the center of the room, and I can always find out where I am even without a light." Just then in trying to turn on the electric light he stepped in the jam and cheese at the same moment. He also found that the electric light had been turned off at the cellar. No one can know just how he would feel under these circumstances unless he has been under those circumstances. Mr. Burbauk had now lost all idea of direction, for the cheese still clung to the sole of his foot and rouned around the room, attracting attention from the radiator.

Mr. Burbank is a tall, slender man, looking very much as Henry Irving would if he had been trying to board at the Gastritis House during the winter Columbus, O. Arrive Columbus o 15 pm
Additional trains for Welch and intermediata stations on Elkhorn leave illuefield 1 155 pm and Thought. Dressed in the simple robe of night, with his dark hair released from its confinement and tossed about over his shoulders, with a cheese sandwich on one foot and a corned beef and mustard poultice on the otner, now and then stepping on a revolving bottle of Halford sance, he made a strong picture as he saved himself from falling by catching at the towel which hung on a rack.

He went three times around the room, feeling on the wall for the button of the bell, but missing it, as he could not get the right height, he opined. In the morning he found that the button was concealed by the headboard of his bed and did not work anyhow.

It now became easy to locate the radiator by the sound it made, also by a little puddle of hot water which he stepped out of with such a wild start that he skinned his knee and hopped around over the lunch in great agony. As he felt the jam oozing up among his toes he became irritated and said:

"If I had it to do over again, I would go to the other hotel."

There were two hetels, one called the Phyloxeria and the other the Bergamot House. We were at the Bergamot. Mr. Burbank approached the radiator and turned the valve open quickly, then stepped back into the Halford sance as a stream of hot water squirted across the room into the cozy bed which he had just left. The little valve nut was now so hot that he could not turn it back for quite a long spell, but after awhile, by the use of a towel, he managed to turn it off enough so that only a small stream came from it, and he filled a china cuspidor with water, also the wash basin and his valise. This he did while trying to empty the basin out of the window. A great deal of the water was spilled when he stepped on the Halford sauce bottle agnin. He emptled the basin while the cuspidor was filling and then emptied 12 while the basin was tilling.

Sometimes in going back and forth he did not step on the Halford bottle at all. He does not remember how many and Grand Army uniform. "I know She is cooking at our house now. -- Brocktimes he did these round trips, but as the who did it. It was one of those brutes lyn Life.

SEMI-WEEKLY INTERIOR JOURNAL THE STEAM RADIATOR gray dawn began to steal timidly across the sullen sky there stood at the open cusement a tall man with a pale, intellectual face and in a simple, fluttering and severely plain negligee with wet sleeves. He was just pouring the last pitcher of hot water out at the window, and below by the body of the watchdog -drowned.

The watchdog lay with glassy eyes chained to the house, and the watchdog's honest bark was peeled off in places where the hot water had struck him. That pale and interesting man was the author of these lines.

At tirst I thought I would say it was Mr. Burbank, but now as I think it over and remember his many kindly acts toward me, and the artist is liable to make a picture of him, I am brought to see that it would be a great wrong.

The moral of the above incident is that the man who is wise and who has been aliroad as far as Escanaba, Mich., or Esquimalt, B. C., will open the escape valve of a radiator when it acts that way and let the hot water "squirt and squirt and squirt." He will not try to save the carpet.

New Whatcom and Fairhaven together constitute a beautiful semicircle about Bellingham bay in the new state of Washington. Fairhaven is quiet just now, a good place to think in or bring up a family, but it fears not. It is generally believed that James Hill is waiting till property gets low enough to buy readily, then will scoop it in and establish the terminus of the Great Northern railroad there. Should be do this he would have one of the pleasantest private towns on the coast.

I do not know whether he will do so or not. Some think he will, and some think he will not. I once lived in a town for some time and held two lots with the hope that Mr. Gould would build there and erect largo shops employing over a thousand men, but Mr. Gould died without having done so. Finally I exchanged the lots for an agent's prospectus of "The Family and Horse Doctor Book" and began to canvass for the same at 75 per cent of the receipts.

Fairhaven and New Whatcom with a a transcontinental road would be a great enccess. All they lack is people. That is true of this whole region.

More honest sweat and less scanning of the horizon for railroads would work well. The growth of all the cities of this new northwest even in the three years since I visited it is astonishing even to one who has made a solemn promise that he will never be astonished.

There was never a better time for the dissatisfied man of the states to come. He should not expect to make a competency while playing "high five" and waiting for his lots to go np, lmt come here with his working clothes and go in to win. If you buy a lot, buy it for a 20year investment and not for the purpose of selling it temorrow for a bank to build

But everything is new and up to date wherever one goes. You will find no bellcords with tassels on them in these cities, but the very latest thing made. It is so in everything. Even the Salvation Army looks more prosperous than it does in older states. Its band is more attractive and sometimes plays a time. It has done great good by working among the coachmen who gather, with their carriages, about the entrance to the opera house where we play.

Colonel William Lightfoot Visscher of Kentucky lived for some years at Fairhaven as an editor. He liked the town; very much, but his wife thought it very crude, and she missed her old friends a good deal, while the genial ordenel knew everybody in the United States, and so was not lonesome. This is offen the case with popular men. They frequently prefor the tribute of laughter and bouhomie down town to the quiet evening at home by the fireside, reading from "Phytarch's Lives" and giving the children their bath.

THE MAN AT THE WINDOW.

So she tried to get him to remain at home and help her wear out the dull evening, but he had all sorts of business engagements and meetings of the chamber of commerce to meet down town.

He belonged to several societies also, including the United Red Men, the Little Defenders and the Fair Haven Compah Oompah band.

Mrs. Visscher got him a billiard table and the game of loto, from which keno was derived, but it was not all these he needed. It was the little band of congenial souls who still remained down town. She lost heart and gave it up.

The place was new, and there were rough characters abroad at night, and late one evening Colonel Visscher came home to find that a big stone bad been years younger!-Yankee Blade. thrown through the window, barely missing his pinno.

lle went out and was gone half an hour without success, but when he came in he found his wife white and speechless. For a time he could not bring her to, but finally she told him that a stone or something had crashed through the window of her husband's room while he was away.

Cantiously he went in there. He found broken glass on his carpet and a short piece of metal like a bit of gas pipe closed at both ends and a cunning little fuse at the end.

Colonel Visscher's face grew pale, They sat hand in hand during the long, dark night, and in the morning he took the bomb to the police and sold his house.

They went to Portland to live, and when they were settled one evening Mrs. Visscher came up to him, and runing her fingers through his clustering hair-his hair that was once so flowing, but now so fled-she told him with a tenr how she was the assassin, and how she got the plumber to make the bomt for her and fill it with baking powder, so she could throw it through his window while he was down the road at the other side of the house.

PHILOSOPHY OF FAT.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX GIVES GOOD ADVICE TO STOUT WOMEN.

The Most Artful Dressmaker Cannot Make a Thin Woman of a fut One-Exercise and Dieting For the Reduction of Flesh. Delsartenn Movements.

Corrigid, 1860, by American Press Associa

forever complaining of her sine and discomfort and never doing anything to overcome or avoid either is one of the most unrensonable beings on earth. I do not know that reasonableness is a frequent quality in woman stout or otherwise, but this excess of unreason appertains especially to the dissatisfied fut lady. A satisfied fat woman is a comfort and delight to all who know her. She knows that she is too fat to be fashionable in her atthre or remarked for her elegance, and she does not essay either one or the other. She leaves that for slighter people, and there is no envy or sorrow in her reminiscences-those Inevitable reminiscences of the stont lady-of the time when her waist measured 18 inches and she weighed only 100 pounds. She speaks of that time with a sort of dry humor and shakes her fat sides good naturedly as she thinks what her present weight is, and how impossible it would be to find her waist line if she wished to measure it. She cujoys the good things of life, and she is like a dear, warm, animated pillow to all her children, who sung into her arms. She wears loose, blomsy sort of dresses or belted Mother Hubbards and looks very uncomfortable when forced into a convey. sning waist on Sunday.

But this dear old aunty or mother or neighbor, whom we all have known and loved and who would have been less pleasing to us if she had welghed an onnee less, is not at all the being to whom I refer in the beginning of this article. The dissatisfied fat lady is too hizy to prevent or reduce the accumulation of flesh by exercise and too self indulgent to control her appetite. She allows herself the luxury of food and sleep to an inordinate degree, and she complains unremittingly of her weight and size. She possesses the feminine love for admiration to an extreme extent, and she is passionately fond of dress. Upon her poor dressmaker she the soblier's trials and made the mem wreaks all her vengeance at the fate ory of them worth preserving. which has overtaken her. She expects that unhappy modisto to diminish her hips and canso her abdomen to be havisible through some sort of necromancy connected with the trade

She copies the dress of her slender neighbor and is furning with anger when she finds herself looking under and fat The whole funlt of her appearance is laid at the dressmaker's door.

"I would rather make two dresses at half price for a slender weamn than one at double price for a fussy fat woman," said a pale faced dressmaker to me one day "Really ney stout customers are breaking down my nervous system. They expect me to make them look just like a fashion plate, and how can I? The monstreas hips and busts must go somewhere. There is no method of dressmiking that can linbs them, but their owners seem devoid of all reason in the matter."

There is not the slightest necessity for any woman to become overstont if she has the moral will power and physical perseverance to follow out a few simple rules. The appente is a thing of halut, and the giving up of fat producing dishes causes only a temporary discomfort. If persevered in for a few days even, the longing for these things ceases. But, aside from thet, the flesh can be prevented from accumulating on the abdomen by exercises taken, without the aid of apparatus or machinery, in one's room. Let the loosely dressed person lie face downward that upon the theor. Fold the arms across the back. Then muse the head and upper part of body as much apossible from the floor several times in succession. Begin by doing this two or three times only morning and night, as it Is liable to produce lame and sore muscles at first. The second morning increase to four movements, the third to six until 10 or 12 or 15 can be produced without effort and until the chest can be lifted off the floor. This one simple exercise would render a large abdomen impossible it begun in season and persisted in incemittingly. It is excellent supplemented by one of the Delsarte movements, raising the body on tiptoe and slowly lifting thearms above the head ns far as possible with the tinger tips meeting. Let the arms fall as the heels a cross of flowers held against her heart touch the floor, repeating this over and over until fatigno ensues.

Emma Aldott once tidd me that she made it a science to retain the symmetry of her figure. We all know that the life of an opera amger is of all professions the most flesh producing, but this earnest wegnan kept her beautiful form nuspoiled by grossness until her death. If she found her weight increasing beyond a certain point, the diet was reduced, the physical exercises increased. Any woman eme do the same who brings her will power into use.

The already fat woman can reduce her hip measure by the exercises I have described and by controlling her appetite.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX Importance of Self Control.

At a tenement house fire in Brooklyn lately a mother and her two children were burned to death because the mother became panic stricken and refused to carry her little ones to the roof, where all might have been saved. She stood like a statue, paralyzed with fear, while the firemen and others shouted to her to take to the roof. Then smoke and tain of the G. A. R. post, in the solemn flames lapped them all in one fiery emand impressive words of the military brace, and that was the last of a benuti- service, proceeds to command the proces-

HE flags and the flowers blendlike currents of the sume waters on Memorial day. Flowers are the lunnerets of the throbbing underworld and seem to sav, "Here in the bosom of the earth are beauty and grace and parity and strength." And when the rest, white and blue emblems are thrown into the floral fields of nature a harmony so perfect is created that profusion either in bunting or in roses cannot lead to a lose of balance in the ensemble. To the sol dier's mind this mingling of colors as loving lands plant flowers beside the little Grand Army markers at the graveof fallen comrades brings up the idea of re-enforcements, as though the story of heroism, and of devotion, and of victory recalled by Ohl Glory was being repented again and again by each cluster of bright petals that share with it the gen tle airs of heaven.

Naturally whenever a soldier's cy lights upon the starry banner ho thoughts go back to war days. He see in it a facsimile of the one borne in from of his regiment in every charge. Yet is was not a battletlag in the strict sense of the word when he followed it to the gun: or unfurled it upon the line of battle Men looked up to it as the representative of what the nation was fighting for rather than a signal for combat, a challenge to hostility. Now that the strife is a thing of the far past the battleflage are relics and the stars and stripes a live symbol of live ideas. All this is shown in the memorial observances, when the flag and its defenders are honored through the same act and in the same breath that glorifles the reign of peace Flowers come in with settled peace, and love and tenderness are the meaning they

The sentiments of Decoration day are and should be intensely patriotic and not martial, conservatively peaceful and not aggressive. The dead are to be remembered and honored because they fought for a principle and not because by any word or act they betrayed a love of glory. It is the emblem of undying uffection, a sprig of evergreen, that is first placed upon the warrior's grave a a token from the living when the Grane Army opens the ceremony. Then follow: the white rose to symbolize the parity and unselfish devotion of the patrio dead. Lastly the laurel of victory, toker of a triumph that is the reward of puritand a proof of devotion. A MEMORIAL SCENE. How the Bay Is Observed In a Backwood Village.

A correspondent of a New York pape describes a Memorial day scene as fol

Something like an hour bater than advertised the procession forms at the church. First, the band in full uniform with the village fdacksmith as drum no jor in a bearskin hat of mammoth pro portions, a gorgeous cont on his rathstooping shoulders, and wielding hi baton as he would a sledge lummer while the small boys crowd thickly about among the players and surroute the bass drum like thes around a honey jar. Next, two diminutive dramme: bays, very rol in the tuce and very weary, bearing some battered drumwrenthed with flowers, which have seen actual service in battle. Then all the sweet girls which the village school con tuins, with bright, fair taces, white dresses gay with flying ribbons, and each one, down to the unjest little listing mubl in the infant class who bring up the rear, skipping along in her hast to keep up with the large girls, bearing

A squad of Grand Army men in in form shamble along, hame from the unitism, stiff and lumbering from the long marches in the furrows after their plows, and each one taking a kind of go us-yon-please-only-get-there trot, and be hind them one sailor in uniform, the cynosure of all eyes, steps proudly on ulone, a big, handsome, brawny chest's fellow, with a bronzed, strong face, and still farther back a veteran in a buggy drawn by an old, freekled, lame wiste horse sits with his wooden leg, which he has hewed and whitthed out of a stick of wood, resting on the dashboard in from of him, the hero of the day.

Then comes the long line of carriages buggies, wagons, buckboards, any kind of a vehicle on wheels, drawn by lane, tired plow horses, with heavy collars and pieces of sheepskin or scarlet flanuel tied under the straps of the harness, and invariably with a tiny flag on their heads. Arrived at the cemetery, all are sented in order, and the exercises open with a prayer. Everything in the country does begin with a prayer and closes with a benediction. After the prayer, the capful family. If women would only train sion to re-form and march to the graves.

TO ONE IN HEAVEN.

(In loving memory of Robert Gatewood Traytor; died April s4, 1893, aged two years and 7 months

I've visited thy low-made grave, My little one, so dear to me, My heart, so human, could but crave To pierce the gloom and mystery,

Our darling, lost to us so soon Iu lile's fair springtime Can it be The birds still sing as bilthe a tune ! The sun shines on the winds beguile, As when thy life blessed us below ! Ah! me, it seems a weary while

And hold communion sweel with thee,

Thou hast been gone; we miss thee so Sweet angel, from thy home above, ltreathe blessings on our hearts so sore; For oh! our souls reach out in love, And long to gather thee once more Within our arms - so empty now-

And hold thee in a close embrace, And smooth, with tender touch, thy brow, And see again that aweet, pale face, And watch the loving, laughing eyes Grow bright, as with an eager joy

You breathed content la low, soft sighs,

When papa came to greet his boy. We miss the countless winning ways And tender graces that, dear one, Endeared thee to us, all thy days, And left a blank when thou wert gone;

Wa miss the clasp of dimpled arms

About us with such kindly touch-Tis said that love gives added charms, And we did love thee over-much-And the sweet smile that to thy face Lent besuly that is rarely given; That shoue out with a softened grace,

"Even when the soul had flown to heaven. The very air is full of gloom, Because of one dear little face, That used to welcome papa home, Now missed so sadiy from its place;

The vacant chair, the half-worn shoe, The broken play-thinge-sacred now-They speak unto our hearts, so true, Of folded hands and pesceful brow; The little hambs we used lo kiss. And fondle o'er with tenderness-

Oh! now thy soul in worlds of bliss,

Is waiting, while the angels bless. Loved one, though gons beyond our care, Good augels still are hovering near, As If in answer to my prayer, They'tl keep thee, and we used not fear

To us you may not come again, But In the after-time, so fair. So pure and free from sin and pain, We'll meet thee and will know thee ther Upon the shores of peace and love,

With all our sins on earth forgiven, Our souls shall rest, while ages move, With thee, and all we love, in heaven.

A novel idea in the way of a trotting sulky has been perfected by a Mr. Whiteman and a specimen is being built for him by John Moore, of New York. It has but one wheel and is kept upright the horse. The wheel is the usual pneuon the "bike" sulky. It will be cheaper, service in the stud. lighter, stronger and simpler than anything heretofore used, and it is believed that it will develop many advantages in

-C. B. Ryan, of the C. & O. railroad, states that the New York Central's claim to having the largest locomotive in the world on exhibition at the World's Fair, is untenable. Number 350, the monster consolidated iron horse on the C. & O., weighs 127,600 pounds, much in excess: of that of the New York Central's ongine, and yet the locomotives used in pulling the F. F. V. over the mountains dwarf it in comparison, their weight being 135,000 pounds.
